It is true that he has been permitted to attach several of his personal attendants to the public service. His son is the law officer of the state department; one nephew is assistant postmaster at Augusta; another nephew is a special agent of the census, his private secretary has the profitable consulate at Liverpool; and the brother of his son's flancee is secretary of legation at London. But Mr. Blaine selected Mr. Whitelaw Reid for minister to England, and the president wouldn't appoint him; on the contrary the president appointed Mr. Lincoln without even the ordinary courtesy of consulting the secretary of state beart into tears and said that he had been cheated. He was William Grubb, and his father a well-to-do farmer in Illinois, near Chicago. He started off on a tour of inspection, and landed in St. Francis, Cheyenne county, Kas., where a wealthy farmer. Westerly Miller, hired him to work at S15 a month. Grubb worked for the farmer over two years, rising at 4 o'clock in the morning and working until 9 o'clock at night. Last month, his father, being in ill health, wrote for him to come home. He informed his employer, and asked for the health, wrote for him to come home. He informed his employer, and asked for the $150 due him. Last Thursday Miller gave him $150, $25 of which was in $1 bills and silver, and the rest was this confederate money which the ticket-seller had rejected. Grubb says that Miller is a prominent republican and a factor in Cheyenne county politics. He is a strong prohibitionist and would not allow smoking or drinking on the part of his he p. about it. The president did appoint Mr. Reid minister to France, but not until Mr. Joseph Medill had declined the appointment, and he did appoint William Walter Phelps minister to Germany, but not until the senate had rejected Mr.
